

I bought a new Amana refrigerator and to my horror when I went to get a glass of water out of it...it was room temperature. I called the manufacturer and after two different visits from the Amana repair guy it was determined that the water is not supposed to be chilled.

Let me ask you...why do I need to get water out of my fridge if it is not chilled? I can just throw a filter on my faucet and have nice-clean-warm water from there if that is all I want in life. The good news...for an additional charge I could get and install a water reservoir to chill the water. As soon as I was able to order it...I did. I expressed the shipping and installed it within an hour of coming to my door.

Now I have chilled water out of my fridge and the world is right again.

¹⁶So, because you are lukewarm—neither hot nor cold—I am about to spit you out of my mouth.
